Yes on Prop 42 will reduce traffic and fix dangerous roads, bridges and intersections.

California has the nation's most congested and deteriorated roads. More than six thousand of our bridges and overpasses have a structural, design or safety problem. Prop 42 is a common sense way to help do something about it, without raising taxes.

Proposition 42 requires the gasoline sales tax we already pay at the pump be used to improve our highways, local roads and mass transit. It simply guarantees that this tax we already pay goes to transportation improvements. And an annual audit is required to ensure the funds are spent properly.

Speeding up safety repairs and traffic relief projects in every city and county in the state will have the added benefit of putting thousands of Californians back to work and giving our economy a much needed boost.
