To: Chair Miadich, Commissioners Baker, Wilson, and Wood

From: Dave Bainbridge, General Counsel

Subject: Complaints against Commission Members

Date: June 6, 2022

Summary

Members of the Fair Political Practices Commission (Commission), including the chair, are subject to the Political Reform Act (Act)<sup>1</sup> like all other state and local officers, and persons participating in regulated political activity. As a result, Commission members can be accused of violating the Act. Such allegations should be investigated and can result in legal action if there is reason to believe a violation occurred.

While the Commission is primarily responsible for enforcing the Act, allegations against a member of the Commission create potential for conflicts of interests and other ethical issues if the complaints are addressed by the Commission, or its staff. To avoid conflicts and preserve the integrity of the Act and the Commission, staff recommends adopting a regulation requiring that any complaint filed with the Enforcement Division alleging a member of the Commission violated the Act be referred to the Office of the Attorney General (AG's Office) as quickly as practicable for investigation and resolution. In referring the case, the Commission would defer to the concurrent jurisdiction of the AG's Office for resolution of the complaint.

Legal Background

A stated purpose of the Act is that "(a)dequate enforcement mechanisms should be provided to public officials and private citizens in order that this title will be vigorously enforced." Consequently, the Act provides multiple avenues for enforcement of its provisions. Nearly all violations of the Act can be pursued through administrative or civil action. Further, if a person knowingly or willfully violates the Act, they can also be subject to criminal prosecution. 4

The Act also empowers various government agencies, as well as private citizens, to bring legal action alleging violations of the Act. The Commission investigates and prosecutes most cases involving alleged violations of the Act via administrative proceedings. The Commission is the only entity authority to bring administrative proceedings for alleged violations of the Act.<sup>5</sup> For civil court actions involving violations of the Act, the Commission shares jurisdiction with local district attorneys, city attorneys, and the AG's Office, depending on who is alleged to have violated the Act. Specifically, the Commission is the "civil prosecutor" for cases involving any state agency, except itself. The AG's Office is the civil prosecutor for alleged violations of the Act involving the Commission, including its members.<sup>6</sup> Also, private citizens can bring civil actions for violations of the Act in the event a designated civil prosecutor fails to pursue a case upon notice of an alleged violation.<sup>7</sup> The AG's Office has jurisdiction over criminal violations of the Act for state agencies.<sup>8</sup>

While the Act does not explicitly provide for referral of complaints to other agencies, such authority exists as the result of the concurrent jurisdiction provided under the Act. The Enforcement Division occasionally refers complaints to other agencies in instances when doing so would be preferable for obtaining adequate resolution of the complaint, or where the other agency expresses an interest in pursuing a particular complaint.

While various agencies and individuals have the authority to bring legal action under the Act, if one agency, or person, pursues a case involving violations of the Act, it typically prevents others from bringing action for the same violation. Specifically, only one civil judgment can be obtained for a particular violation of the Act<sup>9</sup> and an administrative order by the Commission will preclude subsequent civil actions for the same violation.<sup>10</sup>

Analysis

Legal and ethical concerns with complaints against Commission members

If the Commission were to pursue a complaint alleging a member of the Commission violated the Act, it would create the possibility of a conflict of interest violation under Section 87100 if the member alleged to have violated the Act participated in or attempted to influence a decision concerning the complaint. Under the Act, an official has a financial interest in a decision and may not make, take part in making, or use the position to influence the decision if it is reasonably foreseeable the decision will have a material effect on the official or the official's immediate family. A reasonably foreseeable financial effect on an official's personal finances is material if the decision may result in the official or the official's immediate family member receiving a financial benefit or loss of $500 or more in any 12-month period due to the decision. As a result, the imposition of a monetary penalty in an enforcement matter against a Commission member could result in a conflict of interest violation.

&lt;sup>8</sup> Section 91001(a).

&lt;sup>10</sup> Section 91008.5.

Similarly, Section 1090 prohibits a Commission member from having a financial interest in any contract entered into by the Commission. To determine whether a decision involves a contract, one should refer to general contract principles.<sup>13</sup> However, the provisions of Section 1090 may not be given a narrow and technical interpretation that would limit their scope and defeat the legislative purpose.<sup>14</sup> Accordingly, the prohibition of Section 1090 likely extends to the settlement of a Commission enforcement action against a Commission member. Moreover, unlike the Act, recusal is not sufficient under Section 1090 if the disqualified official is a member of a decision-making board. Absent an applicable exception, the Commission, as a whole, is not permitted to enter into a contract in which a sitting member has a financial interest.

Additionally, a Commission enforcement proceeding concerning a Commission member could create the potential for a common law conflict of interest. The common law conflict of interest doctrine requires a public officer "to exercise the powers conferred on him with disinterested skill, zeal, and diligence and primarily for the benefit of the public." Similarly, the state's Code of Ethics prohibits elected and appointed officers from participating in decisions that will have a direct monetary effect on them. <sup>16</sup> The Commission handling a complaint against a Commission member creates obvious risk of violating these provisions.

Beyond specific legal requirements, the Commission strives "to meet high ethical standards that exceed legal minimums..." The actual or even apparent impropriety of internally addressing a complaint against a Commission member is inconsistent with the Commission's high ethical standard for the conduct of the Commission and the agency.

Proposed Regulation

Proposed Regulation 18315 provides specific instructions for referring complaints against Commission members to the AG's Office. Subdivision (a) requires the Chief of Enforcement to refer a complaint against a member of the Commission to the AG's Office within 2 business days. This is consistent with the provision of the Act designation of the AG's Office as the civil prosecutor for Commission-related violations of the Act <sup>18</sup> and places the authority to investigate and prosecute alleged violations of the Act by a Commission member in the hands of a neutral party. The timing requirement ensures the complaint is transferred without delay or opportunity for improper Commission member involvement. Proposed subdivision (b) requires that the referral be made in writing with a copy of the complaint and any other materials received to the AG's Office.

During the Commission's pre-notice discussion of this proposed regulation at the April 2022 Commission meeting, the Commission suggested that the regulation require the Chief of Enforcement to inform the Chair if a complaint had been filed against another Commission member so that the Chair could inform the Commission member that the complaint had been made. Proposed subdivision (c) requires the Chief of Enforcement to inform the Chair of a complaint against a member of the Commission, or the Vice Chair if the complaint alleges the Chair violated the Act. Additionally, staff recommends in proposed subdivision (d) that a Commission member alleged to have violated the Act receive notice of the complaint upon referral of the complaint to the AG's Office. Subdivision (d) is consistent with how sworn complaints against non-Commission member respondents are handled under Regulation 18360, subdivision (b), and ensures that a Commission member against whom a complaint is filed will be notified of such a complaint in the same manner as non-Commission member respondents are notified.

Conclusion

By providing procedures for handling complaints against Commission members that ensure the matter is referred as quickly as practicable to the AG's Office with notice to the interested parties upon referral, the proposed regulation would uphold the Commission's high ethical standards and avoid the possibility of conflicts of interest for Commission members by placing the authority to address complaints against Commission members with a neutral party. Staff recommends the Commission adopt the proposed regulation.
